

Eye Drops Off Shelf

One Sunday afternoon on November 21, Susan Bradley, a 35 year old single mom was out Christmas shopping for her two boys at the great toy store called Toys R Us.

While Susan was around shopping and looking for gifts, she came across this gift for her youngest boy, Brad. As she reached up to grab the gift, she saw something quite unusual on the shelf. This could have been life changing for her. When she got the gift off the top shelf, a real human eye rolled off the shelf and onto the floor.

A worker saw Susan drop and pass out, so she rushed over to check on Susan when she too, saw the eye, but did not pass out. The worker quickly rushed to the manager and the phone to call an ambulance. When the ambulance arrived Susan was rushed to emergency and the store shut down for a good 3 days to have the store checked over.

“All I remember is grabbing the toy off the shelf and seeing an eyeball fall off the shelf and hit the floor. After that my vision was black,” said Susan Bradley.

“Being the manager of Toy R Us, it was the right thing to do for shutting the store down for the 3 days for inspection of all shelves and isles. It scared everyone that was working and myself included,” said manager George Wastson.

Jenny Stewert said, “ I saw her fall, so I just had to rush over, to check on her when I saw the eye. I had to call emergency, and find the manager.”

All Toys R Us are being inspected in BC, to make sure no more issues like this will happen again. I do believe this will be the last time Susan Bradley will shop in any Toys R Us.
